

2007 Eastern Section Meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists
Lexington Hyatt Regency – Lexington Convention Center
Lexington, Kentucky
Sunday, September 16 – Tuesday, September 18, 2007

Dear Prospective Exhibitor:

You are warmly invited to exhibit at the 36th Annual Meeting of the Eastern Section of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. The Kentucky Society of Professional Geologists in conjunction with the Kentucky Geological Survey and the University of Kentucky Department of Earth and Environmental Sciences is hosting the Eastern Section meeting at the Hyatt Regency-Lexington Convention Center located in downtown Lexington, Kentucky, September 16-18, 2007.

The theme of the 2007 meeting is “Winning the Energy Trifecta” which reflects the challenges we face exploring for, developing, and utilizing energy resources in an environmentally-sustainable way. Kentucky's central location and scenic geology provide a perfect setting for discussing energy issues in the Appalachian, Illinois, and Michigan Basins. The technical sessions, workshops, and field trips have been designed to address these three major areas of energy industry activity.

The exhibit area at the Lexington Convention Center has been newly constructed and provides us with ample carpeted space adjacent to the oral session rooms and poster sessions (see pictures on the website). The exhibit hall will form the core of the meeting, including the opening icebreaker reception on Sunday evening. The exhibits will be open from the icebreaker on Sunday evening through 4pm Tuesday afternoon. Security will be provided in the exhibit area overnight.

We are considering having a session one afternoon where exhibitors will have an opportunity to present their products or new technologies. The amount of time allotted for each presenter will be determined by the number of exhibitors participating. If you would be interested in doing a presentation, please let me know.

Additional details are available on the website, contracts will be available at the website or by contacting Dan Wells (Exhibits Chair). Feel free to call, or e-mail, should you require additional information.
